The Immigration Curse.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Representative Owen, Chairman of the House Committee on Immigration, which made the recent investigation at New York, reported to a joint meeting of the Senate and House Immigration Committee to-day. The inspection of immigrants at Castle Garden he pronounced a farce. The observation of immigrant officials is that the undesirable element is increasing. Italians are coming in hordes without money or clothes. Owen said that Italian bankers in this country send agents to Italy to solicit natives to come to America. Arriving at New York they go to boarding houses kept or controlled by these Italian bankers and thence sent out to labor under contracts made by bankers or padrones who take a share of the immigrants' wages. Within the past eight years they have almost entirely supplanted other races in the ranks of unskilled labor in New York City. In one square mile in New York City there are 270,000 people who speak Italian. The quality of immigration is on a whole deteriorating.

Committed Suicide.

Special to the JOURNAL.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—Three months ago a man calling himself R. B. Schwartzkopf, and claiming to represent the New York Mutual Life Insurance Co., registered at the Baldwin Hotel in this city. He led a fast life and spent money freely. E. J. Baldwin advanced him $1,400 and M. B. Curtis the actor, $250, on drafts on the National Bank of Deposits, of New York. The bank refused to honor the drafts and to-day Baldwin notified the police officers, who went to the hotel and found Schwartzkopf in a room with Curtis. The latter left and the officers followed him. When they returned they found Schwartzkopf had shot himself through the left temple, dying instantly. On his person was found a card giving his address as 120 Broadway, New York.

NEWS OF THE MORNING.

LABOR DAY PASSES WITHOUT ANY VIOLENT DEMONSTRATIONS.

The Anti Trust Bill Passes The House—A Bold Diamond Robbery.

Labor Day Peaceably Observed.

Special to the JOURNAL.

CHICAGO, May 1.—May Day, with its demonstrations by organized labor, has come and gone, and the predictions of riot and bloodshed and almost universal strike has not been realized. Thousands quit work for a day to march in the great parade and many thousands made it a holiday. It was an orderly, good natured crowd and an orderly parade. The number of men in line is estimated at 30,000. Six thousand carpenters led the demonstrations.

Almost every trade was represented in the procession. Many trades had gaudily decorated floats on which were realistic representations with members of the craft pursuing their daily occupations. One of the features of the procession was the enormous number of banners and mottoes carried. After parading through some of the principal streets on the West Side they marched to Lake Front Park, where they listened to addresses from several standards.

DENVER, May 1.—Three labor demonstrations here to-day. No strikes anticipated.

PARIS, May 1.—All tranquil in the provinces to-day. In the city large crowds gathered at various points but perfect order was maintained until 8 o'clock this evening, when a body of workmen, trying to march down Rue de la Cireque toward l'Ecole Palace were stopped by the police. The paraders tried to force a way through and were charged by the squadron guard and many wounded. A large number was arrested but will be released at midnight. Floquet received a socialist delegation headed by Guérde, which presented a memorandum in favor of the eight-hour law.

PITTSBURG, May 1.—Labor day in Pittsburg was uneventful. Peace and harmony prevailed in all branches of business, save cornicks and tin work industry. Three hundred tanners came out this morning for an advance of 25 cents per day and seven firms have already granted the demand. It is thought the strike will be over by Saturday.

Throughout western Pennsylvania, however, a number of strikes were reported to-day.

At Johnstown, Scottdale, Jeannette Greensburg and Braddock, carpenters and joiners came out for eight hours work on increase of wages. The demands have not been granted and building operations have been practically suspended in these places.

At McKeesport there was a monster demonstration under the auspices of the Carpenters' Union, in which several thousand workmen, representing all branches of trade participated. In Smithton mining district, the strike situation is unchanged. Both sides are firm and a settlement seems far off.

St. Louis, May 1.—The labor parade to-day was a great success and the crowd orderly and loyal. The stars and stripes was the only flag to be seen. Few banners were displayed and the inscriptions very moderate. The labor situation here is problematical. It is not at all improbable that there will be trouble in the building trades.

G. A. K. Parade.

Special to the JOURNAL.

ELLENBURG, Wash., May 1.—The parade of the State Encampment, G. A. R., moved at ten this morning with two hundred veterans in line. Gen. Alger marched with the old soldiers. Mrs. Legen reviewed the parade. Alger and party left for home at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

The Encampment this afternoon elected M. M. Holmes, of Seattle, as Department Commander and Puyallup was selected as the place for holding the next Encampment. Adjourned.

Died of Blood Poisoning.

SACRAMENTO, May 1.—Miss Bord, who resided with her parents at Winters, Yolo county, died here last night from the effects of blood poisoning, caused by colored silk thread which was run through her ears recently when she had them pierced for rings. The girl was nineteen years old.

Arrival of a Man-of-War.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—The United States man-of-war Marion, arrived in this port this afternoon from Yokohama.

The Public Debt.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The decrease of the public debt during April was $7,637,000. Cash in Treasury, $632,255,000.

WHAT ON EARTH

Is the reason people will not, can not or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties of enormous profits, rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine that is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BERG'S BLOOD PURIFIER AND BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work will cost you nothing.

GRAPE CULTURE IN NEVADA

CAREFUL INQUIRIES PROVE THAT THEY CAN BE GROWN.

An Abundant Market Ready—Successful Samples Found in Many Parts of the State.

The following report was prepared for publication by order of the State Board of Trade, and offers encouragement that a most valuable branch of business may be built up here.

RENO, Nevada, April 25th, 1890. To The President and Directors of the Nevada State Board of Trade:

GENTLEMEN:—The inquiries instituted by your direction into the subject of grape culture in Nevada, have established the fact beyond all question that our climate and soil are well adapted to the vine and that any one of a dozen excellent varieties can be successfully grown here.

The gentleman referred to by Mr. Mills in his opening address, who said he had two olive trees loaded with fruit coaxing him for sixteen years to set out an olive orchard, is paralleled on a hundred ranches in this State where Concord and Catawba vines bear abundantly right along year after year, with little or no attention and no sign of a failure; and yet with an immense cash market ready to buy every pound that is offered there probably has never been a pound exported from the State.

The impression prevails among our people that because Nevada's more frosty winters will not permit of our raising the raisin and the other semi-tropical grapes which have made California famous, that we can do nothing in that line. Such is very far from the truth. California has anything but a monopoly of the grape business of the country. New York, New Jersey, Ohio and others in the north and nearly all of the southern states compete with her successfully in both fruit and wine. An immense territory which lies much nearer to Nevada than it does to Ohio goes there for a large part of its table grapes and hundreds of carloads are sent annually into Montana, Idaho, Dakota, Colorado, Western Kansas, and Nebraska and even into Oregon, every pound of which are of varieties which can be grown successfully in this climate.

While the answers to inquiries sent out have not been as general as was desired yet enough has been learned to prove beyond all doubt that such fruit can be grown in quantities sufficient to make it a valuable addition to our industries, offering profitable employment to a large class of people. At the same time if there should be any question of labor to handle the crop, the hands from the Piute reservation, which are shipped over the mountains every year to aid in picking hops, could be called in. As to quality it is a well known fact that all fruits large and small have a much finer flavor and greater excellence in every way when grown in a climate which has a season of frost than where the climate is negative and uniform. The berries, apples, plums and fruits of all kinds which are imported cannot compare with the home production, and the Catawba and Concord grapes grown here are as much superior to the Mission and Muscats from the mountains as apple is to plum, kin.

The Controller's report for last year gives figures from the County Assessor's reports which show that there are forty thousand grape vines in this State, which should be enough to show that they can be grown to advantage but the result of closer inquiry shows that the country everywhere, except in the higher altitudes, is particularly well adapted to this industry and that it affords exceptionally good opportunities for those who will go into it more extensively.

J. T. Read, of Franktown, said in a personal interview with the writer: "I think the land composed of volcanic dust, which is so common in Nevada, would be the finest grape soil to be found anywhere. I have secured a place and intend to try it."

D. C. Wheeler said: "I have two Catawba vines at the Towle ranch, a thousand feet higher than Reno, which bear every year and the fruit ripens, although they have received no attention whatever."

Richard Ryland, of Reno, said: "I pick several large baskets of ripe grapes from a Concord vine at my front gate every year and it never fails. The flavor of the grapes is very fine."

L. J. Flint, the Sheriff of Washoe county, said: "I had three Catawba vines that bore every year and the fruit never failed to ripen. There was a good yield and the quality was excellent. My vines were destroyed by the fire of last May."

In fact no failure of the vines are reported, although Mr. George Alt, of Glenada, who farms a very rich piece of bottom land on the bank of the river, dug his Concord vines up because the fruit was of poor quality. It is probable that the soil was too strong and damp for it.

Dr. Hogan proves an exceedingly interesting witness: He said: "Fifteen years ago last Fall I set out twenty one-year-old vines in my garden of the old Concord variety. Of these there are now fifteen living. I have never taken any precautions to shield them from the storms and frosts of Winter, although it might be well to do so. For the past twelve years there has never been a single season that the vines have not borne fruit, some seasons more plentiful than others, and there has been no season that they have not ripened long before the frost came. From our few vines we have every year more grapes than we can use, and frequently are able to give a great many away. In our climate they are a surer crop than ever currants, and to-day I am more certain that I will have a crop of grapes this Summer than I am that I will have a crop of currants, but whether they can be cultivated profitably for the market is a question I cannot answer."

Joseph Frey began to experiment with grapes in 1867 at Franktown, but spent years on the wrong track. He was a long time at work trying to grow the Black Hamburg and other vines that will not stand a winter. The Catawba grew well but would not ripen in that soil, which is a cold, decomposed granite. He set out 500 vines but got no result. One day when he was trimming the vines B. G. Clow was passing by and took some slips which he planted at his place near Steamboat. He afterwards reported that they did well.

Several years ago Mr. Frey moved to his present home on Indian Flat and brought some vines with him. They all grew well, bore fruit every season, and last year one Catawba vine yielded over a bushel of fine ripe grapes. He is now going into grape growing more extensively and has eighty Concords, forty Isabellas, ten Olivias and many others. He has a vine from Ohio called "Martyr," which is like the Concord but sweeter. All Mr. Frey's vines bear. He has had no failures either in producing or ripening fruit. The vines bloom late in June and then go right along until the fruit is ripe. The worst enemy he finds is the wild birds. Last year a Zinfandel bore at three years old and the fruit ripened. It could not be depended upon however and if the two previous winters had not been very light it would have borne nothing. A Black Hamburg also had two or three bunches and a fig tree bore some fruit. Mr. Frey's experiments simply prove what all can see who look into the matter, that excellent crops of Concords, Catawbas and similar grapes can be grown anywhere in Nevada below the 5,000-foot line, but that the stool grapes of California cannot.

The following note is from an experienced man, who says:

"A soil and climate so favorable to the growth of nearly every variety of vegetable, of the apple, pear, plum and smaller fruits would hardly disappoint the man who makes intelligent effort in the direction of grape growing. If the circulars which the Nevada State Board of Trade are sending forth shall awaken an interest in this latter and kindred branches of industry among our people and lead them even to tentative effort, they will have accomplished great good. In the early fifties Californians had no conception of the possibilities of California soil. For aught that now appears to the contrary, Nevadans are resting in the same blissful ignorance with reference to the agricultural capabilities of Nevada's virgin acres. The rural portion of her population has run in one groove until hubris has nearly smothered enterprise. The great need now is, some agency that will lift them out of that groove and point them to higher, or at least to more varied pursuits. It may be that we have that agency in the recently organized State Board of Trade. Let us hope so.

"Tendering my best wishes for the success of the organization, I remain, very truly yours, JOHN M. RHODES."

LONG VALLEY, April 20, 1890.

And the following from a Bore, Ohio, writer: "I have found out to a certainty that the grape of this region is the Concord. It is the best for seasons as they come and go. It stands shipping, quite a number of carloads having been shipped from Cleveland to Oregon during the past season. It is the best for market and makes a good wine. They say the Catawba makes better wine but ripens so unevenly as to be unsatisfactory.

"The varieties found here are: Concord, a large purple; Delaware, smaller, light-colored, thick-skinned, sweet, table grape. Catawba, Clinton, Niagara, Brighton, Pocklington, very good, early, but not a standard, more of a door-yard fancy grape. Besides these there is a large number of varieties which every grape grower knows of but none have been raised successfully.

Everybody says Concords are the most profitable, by far, especially in a place where it requires a hardy plant. They are among the best for immediate use, being fine flavored, they ship better than any other and keep longer in condition for use.

"The best wine grape is the Catawba, by far. They ripen here once in five years. Stand the winter all right but do not have a long enough season. When we have a late fall they are a success. Not many are raised here on that account.

"Vines begin to bear at second year. Third year they yield about two-thirds and on the fourth a full crop. The yield of a well-regulated vineyard runs between one to five tons to the acre, depending on the year and the care. The price for Concords is from three to five cents per pound, for others higher.

"The land best adapted to their culture is hilly, dry and poor. One man says, 'so poor it won't raise weeds.' The same, a very successful grower, says never fertilize at all, some others say bone dust is very good. The largest vineyards here are on soil that don't seem fit for anything but brick. The land is prepared as for corn or potatoes and the vines planted eight feet apart, each way.

"Authorities differ as to the cost of preparing soil and caring for vines to maturity. They range from $50 to $200. The successful, says but $50, and the first yield pays.

"The great market for this part is Chicago. Consult Fuller's Grape Culture, Peter Henderson, New York. Buy two-year-old roots rather than yearlings.

"The best informed man in Ohio when it comes to small fruits is M. T. Thompson, Lakewood, Cuyahoga Co., Ohio.

"The vines should be set eight feet apart with a post by each and three strands of telegraph wire running through each row clear across the vineyard."

Prof. W. S. Devol, of the Agricultural Experiment Station, writes: "We have in Nevada conditions of climate and soil, such as are not found in any other locality where grapes have been grown. These conditions are so varied, too, in different parts of the State, that results obtained elsewhere under any one set of conditions cannot be made to apply to any large consecutive area in our State. When, therefore, we find a variety that may be successfully and profitably grown in one locality, we must not too hastily conclude that is the grape for Nevada. I have little doubt that there are within our borders localities in which many of our native grapes, and perhaps others, may be profitably cultivated.

"The following are the varieties with which I am best acquainted: The Concord is most generally cultivated in my native State—Ohio. Perhaps a greater area is devoted to the culture of this variety than to all other varieties taken together. It is a black grape, with medium to large berries in large clusters. It is a very vigorous grower and is very hardy. It is of pure V. labrusca blood, and is not subject to anthrax or mildew and resists the Phylloxera only fairly well. The cluster and berry are of a thin skin, but a good keeper and keeper. It has a vigorous growth, is hardy and free from mildew and rot. It promises to be a good grape for general culture. The Niagara is vigorous, productive, and a good long-keeper, and under favorable conditions is of fine quality, ripening about with Concord. A good market grape.

"There are two other new white grapes that should be mentioned. They are Empire State and Niagara. The former is a tender-skinned, juicy, fine flavored variety, with a thin skin, but a good keeper and keeper. It has a vigorous growth, is hardy and free from mildew and rot. It promises to be a good grape for general culture. The Niagara is vigorous, productive, and a good long-keeper, and under favorable conditions is of fine quality, ripening about with Concord. A good market grape.

The time of fruiting varies somewhat with the variety, but greater variation is caused by the character of the soil, healthiness of the plant and treatment received.

Good plants, set when one year old, will produce some fruit the third season, as a rule; but it is better to remove this as soon as it sets and wait until the fourth year, when a good crop can be obtained from most varieties, if they have received proper treatment. The average yield is about a ton to 1½ tons per acre. Very much larger yields are obtained by many of the most successful growers. The price received varies with the variety, quality, nearness to market, use to which it is to be put and scarcity. The general crop sells for wine-making at 3½ to 4 cents per pound.

"The Catawba is a dark red grape supposed to have a cross of one-quarter vinifera and three-quarters labrusca in it. It originated in North Carolina, but gained its first great popularity from its extensive culture upon the hillsides about Cincinnati, Ohio, and the fine quality of wine made from it. It is hardy and a vigorous grower and roots well from cuttings; but it rots severely and is somewhat subject to anthrax and mildew, and resists the Phylloxera only fairly well. The cluster and berry are of medium size, the skin firm, pulp tough, containing one to three medium-sized seeds.
